Program Brief

Department of Electronics and Communication Engineering organized a webinar session on Fake News Detection on Social Network Using Machine Learning Approaches on 21st April 2021. The program was started at 02:00 PM and wined up at 03:30 PM. Dr Renjith V Ravi, Associate Professor and Head of Department of ECE, delivered the welcome address. Dr G Ramesh, Principal of MEAEC, gave the presidential address. Haji CK Zubair, Administration manager and Prof Haneesh Babu, vice-principal, delivered felicitations. Dr Soumi Dutta, Associate Professor, Institute of Engineering and Management, Kolkata, handled the mentorship of the program.

Because of the quick access and rapid proliferation of information accessible on social media networks, distinguishing between fake and truthful information has become difficult. The ease at which knowledge can be shared has aided in the rapid growth of information falsification. Where the dissemination of false content is expected, the reputation of social media networks is also at risk. As a result, determining whether evidence is false or truthful by automatically checking its source, material, and the publisher has become a research challenge. Machine learning has played a critical role in the classification of data. As a result, determining whether evidence is false or truthful by automatically checking its source, material, and the publisher has become a research challenge. Machine learning has played a critical role in the classification of data. The webinar discusses the aspects of the application of machine learning for fake news detection.

The session started with an introduction to machine learning and applications of machine learning in various areas. Then, the mentor talked about the social impact of the fake news and its catastrophe in society. The session started at 2.00 PM. We thank the resource person for the detailed and clear explanation of the complex concepts and her dedication to providing answers to the questions and doubts raised by the participants. The feedback from the participants about the session was that they felt it was informative and helpful. Mr Rishin Ali, Assistant Professor, ECE, delivered the vote of thanks.
